Meteorologist's View

Winds over the tops possibly stronger than on tables at times, however winds may be somewhat lower in the evening depending on placement of frontal area to south. A wind chill on the tops, despite quite mild temperatures and difficult conditions with wind and rain and some buffeting and mobility issues even on lower slopes, especially early in day.

Forecast for Monday 02 Nov 2020

Weather: Rain may become heavy and prolonged again in early hours before clearing away southwards later in the night. A dry but mostly cloudy start Monday, though soon becoming brighter with sunny spells developing, A scattering of showers also developing by the afternoon, with perhaps some heavy showers, accompanied by hail and thunder and a touch wintry over the tops. Most showers dying away in evening leaving clear spells

Maximum wind: Southwest 20-25 gust 35mph, but possibly 35 gust 50mph in showers where exposed, becoming westerly 25-30 gust 40mph later

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 700m: Nil in early hours, but 60-80% for most of the day with cloud occasionally broken down to 600m.

Visibility: Poor or very poor in early hours, but mostly good or very good by morning. Falling to a few kilometres in showers, perhaps less in any wintriness.

Temperature: Valleys: Plus 8 rising to plus 11 C, but falling to plus 4 C in evening
At 700m: Plus 4 C at first falling to plus 1 C
Freezing level: Gradually falling, down to 800m by the evening
